Notable features: The old houses are large, 3-window, elegantly detailed, with stone basement dressings and tall, to-floor first floor windows. Many still have original doors (see detail of number 327) and door surround. None of this kind of detail should be lost in rehabilitation if it can possibly be saved.

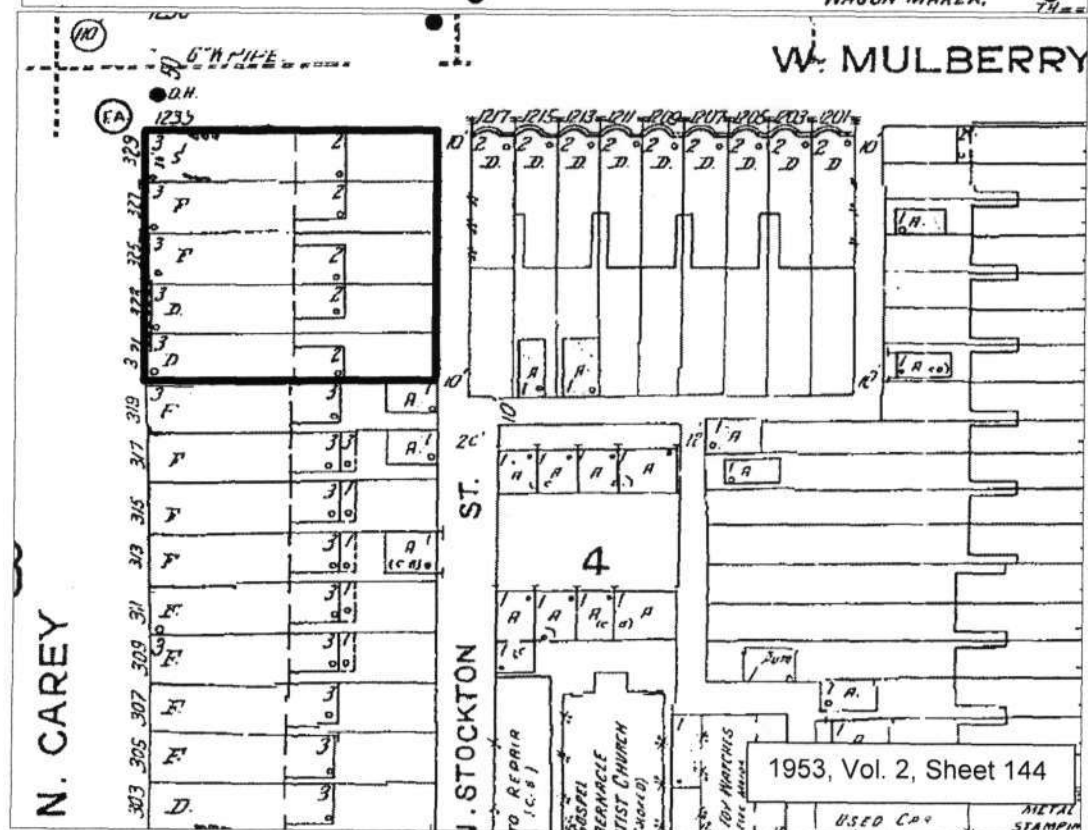

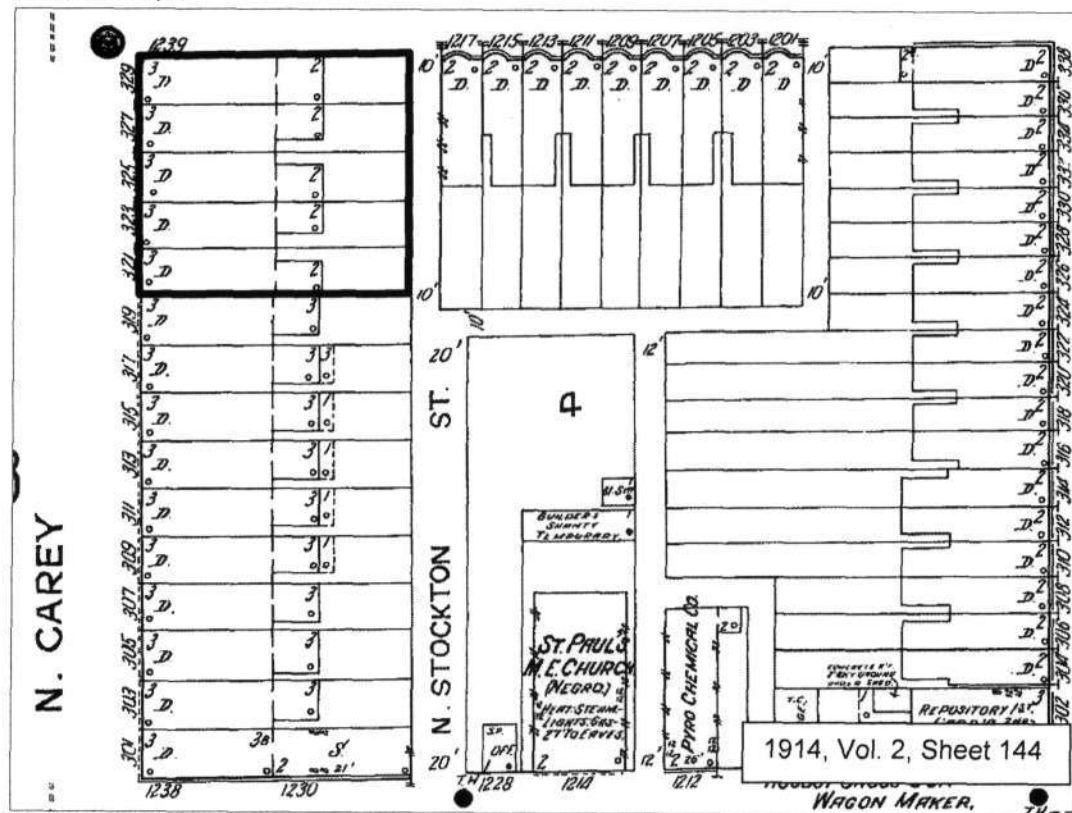

Number 329 has an entrance on Mulberry Street, an original store front, now vacant, facing Carey. The store may in future be feasible again because Carey Street will be open across the expressway in late 1976 or 1977.

Discussion of the new houses (see number 323) is reserved for the sheet on 301-319 N. Carey Street.

Environmental context: No vacancies or gaps (unless you could call the new houses gaps as one like number 323 appears to be). Carey is a wide, two-way street with not too much traffic. It is a pleasant street but could use street trees such as the ones in the block below Saratoga. The house-to-house scale has been damaged by the infills, which appear a bit pigmy-like. All seem to be well maintained, however.
